

How to Watch Super Bowl LIX Kansas City Chiefs vs. Philadelphia Eagles — Live Stream

Most football fans are well aware that Super Bowl LIX is happening today, Sunday, Feb. 9, but do you know exactly where and when to watch it live? With millions of fans tuning in, it's essential to make sure you have the right channel and streaming options set up — especially if you're hosting friends and family for the biggest game of the year.

The Chiefs certainly have the squad with which to do it. Despite questions over its ugly regular-season wins, Kansas City finished 15-2 and bounced chief rival Buffalo in the AFC championship game en route to its fifth Super Bowl appearance in six years. Whether it's their high-powered defense or that trademark Mahomes magic, the Chiefs have found ways to finish the job all season.

The Chiefs are set to face a formidable opponent in the Eagles, who secured their spot with a resounding 55-23 victory over the Washington Commanders in the NFC Championship game. Quarterback Jalen Hurts delivered a masterful performance, completing 71.4% of his passes for 246 yards and showcasing his exceptional rushing ability with three touchdowns.

But the Eagles don't have Mahomes. He is Mr. Clutch, maybe the best ever at getting it done when his team is down or needs him to make a play. The Chiefs are 6-1 this season when trailing in the fourth quarter. In nine playoff games where the Chiefs were behind in the fourth quarter, Mahomes has won six of them and lost two others in overtime after tying it.

NFL fans can watch Super Bowl 59 live thanks to major sports networks such as Fox, Sky Sports and DAZN, as well as online via their respective streaming apps, with plenty of free streams available via Tubi in the US and ITVX in the UK.
